COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

The new building for the storage of Town Clerk's and other Town records is nearly complete. Frank Lowell has had charge of this work and has I believe carried it on very satisfactorily. It is located back of the Community Building. The foundation is reinforced concrete we believe well below frost. The construction is of concrete blocks treated both inside and out with a water resistant paint. The roof is supported by built up steel trusses and is made of corrugated asphalt and then covered with a light weight type of cement that is designed to be strongly resistant to fire as well as moisture. Additional precautions have been taken to safe guard the records against moisture by installing cross flow ventilation, two glass block windows admit light. We still have a little more to do but the building should be ready quite soon and I hope provide ample storage for these records in good condition for many years.

Thank you,
O. T. Rozelle

SAFETY COMM. ASKS SLOW DOWN DURING HOLIDAY WEEK END

Brian M Jewett, Chairman of the Governor's Committee on Highway Safety, and Col Robert Marx, Maine State Police Chief, has issued a joint statement relative to "Operation Slow Down." "Operation Slow Down," sponsored by the Governor's Committee on Highway Safety will go into effect at 3:00 p. m., on Friday, August 31st, and will continue until after midnight on LAbor Day, September 3rd."

"In accordance with Governor Muskie's Proclamation — Slow Down!," said Chairman Jewett, "we, the members of his highway safety committee, plan to conduct one of the most intensive safety programs ever undertaken. We are enlisting the active support of every possible agency which can help us reach our goal—an accident-free holiday period.

"All public informational media are cooperating wholeheartedly in this statewide program," continued Jewett. "Press, radio and television are contributing generously to this all-out effort. Papers are publishing special "Operation Slow Down" material and radio and television are devoting a great deal of time to announcements alerting the driving public to the special dangers of highway travel during this holiday weekend.

"Cooperation from all agencies has been tremendously encouraging," added Jewett. "The Maine State Federation of Labor which is sponsoring 'Safe Driving Week' during this period has alerted its entire membership to the need for extreme caution on the highway, and it is also sponsoring special safety activities."

Referring to the law enforcement phase of the program, the safety chairman said that the greatly stepped-up activity has as its ultimate goal—an accident-free weekend. He stated that all sheriffs and local police chiefs have been asked to throw the complete strength of their organizations into this program and to furnish, if possible, extra patrol cars and personnel. Military installations have been requested to provide additional military police in communities where personnel from the installations congregate.

"The Governor's Committee on Highway Safety has arranged, through the cooperation of the Maine Aeronautics Commission and the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game, to have available five planes, which will be used to assist in traffic control during the day light hours of the entire week end," continued Mr Jewett.

Speaking directly to the driving public, the safety chairman urged: "Every possible effort is being made by your safety committee to make Operation Slow Down a success. Please make your very important contribution—safe, sane, sober driving. Please join Operation Slow Down and help us to record an accident-free week end."

Col Marx added his plea for extreme caution and for complete cooperation with this all-out program initiated by the Governor's Committee on Highway Safety.

"We are cancelling all leaves and all available personnel and equipment will be mobilized to meet this traffic emergency," Col Marx said. "Wherever possible traffic patrol will take precedence over all other State Police duties and responsibilities."

Col Marx emphasized that there will be heavy patrols on all Maine turnpikes and that manned and unmanned cars will be used. He also pointed out that for the first time in the history of the Maine turnpikes, State Police patrols will be supplemented by motor [illegible]

Where Police personnel will be assigned is also being considered by Col Marx. He explained that this decision will be based on the location of work and parking areas and also the balance of new cars on the road. Col Marx said that Chapman and Verrow Roads

Bill's family and Miss Jessica [illegible] enjoyed a picnic supper to the ball game on Wednesday. Fifty-one boys and their chaperones went to Mechanic Falls for the game. Vacations are just too short, it seems to most of us. However, our vacation could be a lot shorter and pleasure could turn into pain.... by accident. If we drive, our State Police suggest that we take care everywhere. An accident may be waiting around that next corner if we are just a bit careless. They ask us to drive carefully, to have a good time for a long time to enjoy every minute of our vacation....safely.

Why people who used to buy higher priced cars are changing to Chevrolet

More and more buyers are deciding that they prefer a sweet handling Chevrolet to a big, unwieldy high-priced car!

When you consider Chevy's reputation for performance and roadability, you wonder why anyone would pay hundreds of dollars more for a higher priced car. Well, a lot of people are finding out these days that they can have a big switch from high priced cars to Chevrolet. From the Shamokin Citizen, Shamokin, Pa.: Many safety campaigns have been directed to the youthful driver. Grim posters have hit hot-rodders in the eye with gruesome reminders of the highway carnage that results from recklessness. Nothing that has been said or written will impress Liverpool's young drivers so deeply as the much publicized action of the National Automobile Underwriters Association.

Liability rates for passenger cars owned or principally operated by male drivers under 25 have been increased 25 per cent in this area.

Young drivers in the business and pleasure use of cars owned by their parents are affected by the new rates.

Persons under 25 who own cars in their own name are not affected by the increase.

The action of the insurance underwriters is not to be criticized. Statistics show that young drivers are involved in a disproportionate number of accidents. Their inexperience, plus a tendency toward carelessness, also holds some dangers. More young driver-owners may decide that insurance is too costly and may operate their cars without providing such protection to other motorists who get in their way.

If this proves the case, increased rates will not mean any more restraint. Additional costs actually could be put on the older age groups which are now favored to meet claims arising from accidents with the uninsured.

The solution could be compulsory insurance for every vehicle. Pennsylvania has still to adopt such legislation. As more and more motorists feel the bite of increasing insurance rates, compulsory insurance will win more popular support.

From the Dallas Tribune, Eufala, Alabama: The forecast for farmers over the long range, is good despite the fact that strike threats are causing some major concern of industry at present.

There is no denying that soft cotton has contributed to the 1956 economic ills but it seems has contributed to many less evils as well as the best it has ever had.

Farm acreage payments are increasing and there is no reason for cuts to be a real threat to future farming, any more.

THE AMERICAN WAY

THE DEMOCRATIC - REPUBLICAN NEW DEAL

by John T. Flynn

(EDITOR'S NOTE: John T. Flynn is a noted author, lecturer and radio columnist.)

A national political campaign again opens before us. We witness the battle for the nominations in crowded conventions. There is debate over the platforms, nomination speeches, wild demonstrations and, finally, two great warriors appear before us as candidates for the presidency. However, no matter what the orators pronounce, or what the platforms say, or who the successful candidates are, there will be no real or fundamental difference between them. There will be one big, overmastering issue. Which candidate and which party will for the next four years administer the New Deal? In another sense, it will be a contest to determine which party will have in its hands the fantastic billions with which politicians now do business.

Let there no no obfuscation about what the New Deal means. In its inception it was merely a label used by Franklin D Roosevelt to sell his party to the people. Its obvious objective was to promote a set of laws and policies which were expected to revive the capitalist system so badly damaged by the crash. Mr Roosevelt had denounced President Hoover as a reckless spender. But having launched a program of spending billions for "recovery" the politicians of both parties—began to see with expanding delight the immense political possibilities of government taxing, borrowing and spending.

Our national politicians could never buy very many votes with a couple of billion dollars in taxes. But when Roosevelt and the Democrats began spending six and eight and ten and then more and more billions, they discovered that they could buy votes in immense groups—not with just pitiful little handouts to individuals, but with billions for this and billions for that, all going to various large minorities. Then, for the first time in our history, a president was enabled to stay in power for four consecutive terms.

For quite a while the muddled Republicans grumbled and muttered against all this spending. But presently, first one and then another Republican "statesman" began to perceive the tremendous value of this taxing, borrowing and spending. Whether it was on peace or war, these grotesque billions could be used to buy immense minorities. For a while, the GOP Christains muttered in their beards against the "shameful extravagance of the Democrats." But presently the facts of political life began to seep into their consciousness. When, therefore the present collection of politicians came to power, they proceeded to outspend their Democratic predecessors. And now both parties have adopted the spending philosophy as a permanent weapon of power.

But alas, another group of political philosophers has been watching with delight this giddy circus—who but the old socialists. Perhaps we should not say "old" socialists, for the party of Norman Thomas has practically disappeared as an engine of power. The modern pragmatic practitioner of politics has noted that socialism is, after all, nothing more than a system in which the government takes vast powers, grabs the incomes of the people and spends them "for their own good." Many of the old socialists have moved into the Democratic or Republican parties—chiefly into the former.

The term "New Deal" now is expanded to mean a system of government in which the administration asserts the right to take over the operation of as much of the economic system as it can get away with and to take over as much of the people's income as can safely be extorted by all sorts of taxes. What cannot be taxed can be borrowed. This, of course, as any rational and objective observer can see, is nothing more than the gradual socialization of the economic system — the installation of government as the employer as well as the ruler of the people, and its authoritarian confiscation of their earnings. The term New Deal is more or less the property of the Democrats, but the Republicans have made no important or serious alteration in this Marxian gradualism. In the four fiscal years of Truman's last administration that eminent statesman, with the Korean War on his hands, spent 222 billion dollars. President Eisenhower in his four years of peace spent 262 billion dollars.

Now the inevitable national election comes around. What are the issues? There is really only one. That is the struggle of the Democrats to oust the Republicans and get back their beloved New Deal which the Republicans have been playing with and which both parties have stolen from the socialists.

Stop, Look and Listen!

Don't Call Car Smashups Accidents! Lawbreaking Is Cause of Most Deaths

The word "accident" is a phony if it's used to describe what happens when cars collide with each other or run down pedestrians.

It's also utter nonsense to regard people who cause these crashes as poor and unfortunate victims of circumstances.

These two fallacies, the experts say, are serious handicaps to our national traffic safety effort. Because people believe these false ideas, we are losing the battle to save lives on the highway and find ourselves in a traffic emergency.

Most of our so-called auto accidents aren't that at all. They are caused occurrences, and the causes are easily identifiable.

Chief Cause

What are the chief causes of crashes? They can be lumped into one large and simple category—LAWBREAKING.

A comprehensive study by a leading auto insurance company reveals that a fantastic number—88 per cent—of last year's highway victims died because of traffic law violations!

This study by Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Company shows that lawbreaking killed 33,700 of last year's more than 38,000 highway victims.

These 33,700 could have been alive and with their families today if the persons who were responsible for the fatal crashes only had obeyed the law.

Commenting on the study, James S. Kemper, chairman of Lumbermens, said that nine out of 10 traffic fatalities could be classified more accurately as "manslaughter or suicide by homicidal highwaymaniacs."

"How can a death that results because of a violation of the law really be classified as an accident?" Kemper asked.

Typical Reports

Ask any police officer trained in traffic investigation and he'll tell you from personal experience the terrible toll exacted by lawbreakers. Or look into reports of typical accidents such as the following to see the vicious results of breaking traffic laws:

—Three youths killed in high speed crash. (Car traveling 90 m.p.h. Speed limit was 65.)

—Driver and woman companion killed when car loses race to railroad crossing. (Violating speed law, ignoring flashing signals.)

—Six killed in headon collision. (One car straddling center lane.)

Eleven persons were killed in these three so-called accidents. They might be alive today if the persons responsible had been truly law abiding citizens. So could 33,700 other people who were killed last year.

Double Standard

When it comes to the law, we Americans have a peculiar double standard. Supposedly we're a nation dedicated to the law and to obeying it. We believe it is good that men obey the law and it is bad when they break it—except traffic laws, that is. We have a different standard for that.

You've heard many people brag about how fast their cars will go. Almost surely they had to break a speed law to prove it.

You've also heard people brag about how they can spot police officers in their rear-view mirrors. They're proud, apparently, that they can break the law and get away with it. But they holler if they are caught by a police officer they didn't see.

Yet behavior such as this is socially acceptable—despite the fact that more than 30,000 people die annually because of lawbreaking on the highway.

It's a fact that most drivers are careful and are law abiding most of the time. The regular and flagrant lawbreakers are in minority, but they're a constant threat to all other drivers on the road.

Any time a driver violates a traffic law, he's a potential killer. You could be his victim.

"The vast majority of drivers who are law-abiding deserve protection from the small but dangerous group of homicidal highwaymaniacs," Kemper asserted.

"If this group of potential killers won't obey the law voluntarily, strict and impartial enforcement of realistic traffic laws and stern justice must be employed to deter them and to protect others."

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

Thursday, August 23

Read I John 1:1-7.

The Light still shines in the darkness, and the darkness has never put it out. (John 1:5, Phillips.)

OUR first opportunity to visit a cave was during a vacation trip. As we stood looking at the rock formations, wet with water, our guide explained that the formation of the rocks by dripping water was started centuries ago. He also said that the green vegetation growing on the walls did not appear until electric lights were installed.

Our guide pulled the electric switch, and the cave was in total darkness—the blackest we had ever experienced. Then our guide lighted a candle. We could see again. All the darkness in the cave could not put out the light of that candle.

A radiant and unfaltering faith in God had its beginning long centuries ago. Christians throughout the ages witness that new life springs forth in the darkest places when exposed to the light of God's Word. The assurances of the Christian faith are that God has established His Word as a light in the world, and that no darkness is black enough to put it out.

Prayer

O Christ, Thou art the true light of this world. So shine into our hearts that all the darkness will be expelled and we shall walk in Thy light without fear and without stumbling. In the blessed name of Christ we pray. Amen.

Thought For The Day

Christ is the Light of the world; no darkness can overcome Him.

TALL, DARK--AND AWKWARD

By Jac Tweton

ROY KENNEDY became self-conscious — again — the moment his six feet four entered the outer office of Acme Television, which was packed with hopeful salesmen, all talking animatedly. Then a short, husky blond fellow yelled uninhibitedly, "How's the air up there?"

"Pretty warm. Heat rises, you know," Roy managed. But he was so tired of that quip.

"Bet you played basketball?"

Roy smiled ruefully. "I love sports—"

"But you grew too fast."

"That's what mother said," Roy agreed. She sympathized with him, Dad was disappointed, everyone else made fun of his awkwardness, except Georgia. Georgia didn't, even when he stepped on her feet while dancing. "And Georgia," he added loyally.

"Wife or girl friend?"

"Girl friend—so far. But if Acme hires me, I'll propose."

"Mr. Wilcox and Mr. Kennedy," R. H. Adams' blonde secretary announced as two more salesmen walked dejectedly out of Adams' office.

Roy's hopes fell when Tim got up with him. Roy was paired with the best salesman in the room!

Wilcox grinned at the blonde as they passed her desk. "Watch me, baby," he said, and winked. She smiled at him, but not at Roy.

Adams was not a man to waste time. He was looking at his watch when the men entered. Roy bumped into the chair Adams waved him toward. Wilcox did not stumble. Adams glanced impatiently at Roy who thought, I've dropped the ball again. Tall, dark, and awkward—that's me.

"According to your letters of application, your qualifications are nearly identical," Adams said crisply. "That's why I called you in here together, as I do others with similar records." Adams was quite as awesome as rumored — head bent forward slightly so his grayish-blue eyes looked chillingly from under black, brushy eyebrows. "Before I ask you to demonstrate how you'd sell Acme, I want you to tell me why you want this job. Don't stop to think."

Hope he asks Wilcox first, Roy thought.

"Kennedy," Adams nodded.

"Sir," Roy began, "I feel I can benefit the company—and myself—by becoming a salesman for Acme Television. I believe Acme to be a fine old company—as TV firms range in age." Then he was horrified to hear himself blurt, "And I'd like to get married, sir."

"Wilcox," Adams barked.

Roy envied him silently.

"I think I can be the acme salesman for Acme Television." And, Wilcox glanced at Roy, "as long as we're bringing in personal reasons," he became serious. "I wasn't going to mention this, but Marie and I have three of the sweetest kids in the world, Jimmy, Katie and Junie. They're swell, Marie, too." Wilcox stared solemnly at the carpet a moment, then continued, "But Jimmy's never been well, and he needs a very serious operation." Adams' granite visage softened noticeably. "We haven't any relatives to help us, and well, to be honest, that's my main reason right there Jimmy."

He's certainly deserving, Roy thought resignedly.

Adams almost beamed at Wilcox, but he was still all business. "Now for the selling demonstr—" A loud perfunctory knock interrupted him as the door swung open. "Can't you see I'm busy, Peters?"

"But, R. H., I just set a sales record. Wait till I—Tim! You old loafer! I didn't think you'd apply here. Did Marie push you into it so you two can get hitched?"

After an instant of heavy silence, Adams leaped to his feet and roared, "Kennedy, you're hired! Acme prefers tall men to tall stories."

GOULD CLASSES '10-'11 HOLD REUNION AT SHELBURNE, N. H.

On Sunday, August 19, the Gould Academy classes of 1910 and 1911, held their annual reunion at Shelburne Inn, Shelburne, N. H.

At 12:30 nineteen had arrived and the call to dinner was soon made.

Shelburne Inn proved to be a happy choice for the reunion as the food was excellent and well served and the management gave us exclusive use of the dining room.

Greeting cards were signed by all, which will be sent to Alice Smith Brown and Alta Smith who were too ill to be present.

A short business meeting and talk was held on the porch. After reading the minutes of the 1955 meeting, Cedric Judkins was chosen as presiding officer to conduct the meeting. Leslie Davis was chosen as permanent secretary. Cards and letters were read from Alta Smith, Mrs Ivan Arno, Mollie Stanley and Marjorie Cushman Brooks.

It was voted to record the death of Ivan Arno from the class of 1911 and Annis Pingree Kenlston of the class of 1910 during the past year. Edith Brown and Eva Herrick from 1910 class and Tom Brown and Gladys Hall from 1911 class were chosen to arrange for the 1957 reunion.

Leslie Davis, who as a trustee of Gould Academy, was appointed to a committee chosen at the 1956 Alumni meeting to study the attendance and dues problem of the Alumni Association brought up this subject for discussion. Meeting adjourned.

Those present were: Retta V Shaw, Ida M Packard, Gladys B Hall, Edith Brown, Eva Herrick, Arthur Herrick, Helen H Bean, Clifton E Bean, Edna Bean, Fred Hall, Arthur Brown, Cedric A Judkins, Jennie L Judkins, Fred Judkins II, William Judkins, Methel Packard, Tom Brown, Marie Davis, Leslie E Davis.

Here's a word to that usually wise, but sometimes careless, car driver: Our Governor's Committee on Highway Safety tells us that it is not only the poor driver and the daredevil who have accidents. Many accidents are caused by everyday-type drivers traveling too fast, or taking one chance too many. Be safe. Slow Down and Live.

SUNDAY'S SERMON

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

TWO MASTERS

In the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus called upon his hearers to give themselves fully and unreservedly to the services of their heavenly Master. To every man comes the opportunity to serve one master or another. And Jesus says we cannot serve God and mammon. Indeed this is more than opportunity; it is the destiny that comes to every soul.

The statement of Jesus concerning masters seems so apparent that it requires but little comment. In recent years we have read of a number of men and women who have tried to serve two masters and have come to grief by and by. They have ended by being branded as traitors, being put in prison or even executed. For being a traitor to one's country is something a nation cannot pardon.

And it may be truly said that treason to Christ is something that cannot be forgiven. A man is either true to Christ or he is not. And to be faithless leads a man away from God, who is ever the Source of light and life.

So let us never falter in our service to our Lord and Master, as knowing that some day he will say unto us, "Well done, good and profitable servants."

A large, 14-platform railroad terminal in Philadelphia is used only one day a year—and on that day by as many as 40,000 passengers in 40 or 50 special trains, cadets from West Point, midshipmen from Annapolis and thousands of civilians arrive at the station and fill the municipal stadium to witness the Army-Navy football game.

WIDE, WONDERFUL WORLD

By FRANKLIN J. MEINE
Editor, The American People's Encyclopedia

IT'S ALMOST impossible to separate the recreational and hobby field from the "do-it-yourself" activities. But it's worthy of note that the recreational and hobby field grew from the $10 million mark in 1945 to $200 million in 1955. The "do-it-yourself" program amounted to $10 billion in 1955. It catered to the apartment dweller as much as the home owner. A survey indicated that 80 per cent of home owners planned to do their own remodeling. Tile, paint and wood paneling were tops in the list of items which were first to be used. Although these personally used items were first offered to males, the lady of the house came into her own, with manufacturers making materials and tools light enough for any woman to handle.

For the first time—and shame on the 50,000 American tournament players—the U. S. lost the world's championship to a team of British players.

If you are, we won't stop you but one idea for you as you clean.
